We are pleased to invite you to the first edition of the series of virtual training workshops on Carbon Markets, to be held in Zoom.

This series is part of the Arpel Energy Transitions Committee's work plan, is carried out exclusively for Arpel member companies, at no cost, and is made possible thanks to the contribution of IETA professionals (<https://www.ieta.org/about/>), leading international organization in the field.

FIRST EDITION

The first edition will focus on the general basic concepts of these markets, with the aim of aligning knowledge among all our members and getting to know the main terms that govern the topic and tools available. It will be in charge of Camilo Trujillo from IETA, who is Political scientist with studies in sustainability and emissions trading. Currently, Camilo is the Leader for Latin America and the Caribbean of IETA, the International Emissions Trading Association, coordinating the organization's activities in the region. Camilo led the development of technological solutions for different environmental markets for 5 years and has experience in corporate sustainability working for the electricity sector.

FORMAT

The series will be developed in the format of interactive virtual meetings so that you can raise all your concerns and questions during each session. The second edition will focus on "Policy and regulation in Latin America and the Caribbean and its implications for our sector. Where are the regulations going?" and will be scheduled in November (exact date to be determined). The following editions will continue in 2025.
